

Dr. Kashani is trained in the fields of Nephrology and Critical Care Medicine. He is currently ranked as a Professor of Medicine and Assistant Professor of Medical Education; he serves as a consultant in the Division of Nephrology and Hypertension and the Division of Pulmonary and Critical Care Medicine at Mayo Clinic, Rochester, MN. He is currently the chair of the Nephrology-ICU Committee and Digital Health Committee under the division of Nephrology and Hypertension. His research interest is focused on acute kidney injury, kidney injury biomarkers, acid-base and electrolytes, kidney replacement therapies, extracorporeal blood purification strategies, ECMO, fluid management, simulation medicine, point-of-care ultrasonography, artificial intelligence and digital health, and education. In addition, he provides lectures regarding AKI, education, and fluid management globally. He has published 425 peer-reviewed papers and written several book chapters.